

For an International School in Leipzig we are looking for a

Secondary Teacher for Science, focus on Biology (m/f/d)

Reference number 295DB

Your employer is a leading educational institution specialising in high-quality international education. Diversity, inclusion and intercultural understanding form the basis for the inspiring team spirit and family atmosphere at the centres. Both the children and young people as well as the teachers and staff can develop in the best possible way and fulfill their personal potential. In secondary school, about 470 students are learning and preparing for the Cambridge IGCSE and IBDP final exams. Excellent academic results benchmarked against the International Schools' Assessment and the IGCSE and IB Diploma international examinations are proof of the quality education provided.

Your responsibilities: Create an inspiring learning environment, promote international-mindedness, collaboratively plan and deliver engaging, relevant and challenging lessons, provide meaningful feedback, build strong partnerships with parents, contribute to and work collaboratively within the whole school community.

The school offers you:

- a permanent position initially limited to two years, by the option of a subsequent employment contract with an infinite duration,
- a vibrant, diverse and supportive school community,
- opportunities for professional growth in a globally connected environment,
- wonderful students who are interested in learning,
- a dynamic and diverse workplace that continues to develop best teaching and learning practice,
- company benefits such as company pension scheme, supplementary health insurance, moving allowance, JobRad Leasing and if needed, financial support for a German language course etc.

The school would like to hear from you:

- a University degree in Science with focus on Biology or comparable education and a valid teaching licence,
- proven success as an exceptional Science educator and/or expert in an inquiry focused learning environment,
- familiarity with international curricula and experience in a diverse, globally-minded school community,
- a belief in holistic education that goes beyond academics,
- high proficiency in written and spoken English.

Have we piqued your interest?

If so, we look forward to receiving your documents, which we will of course treat with absolute confidentiality. Please send your application, quoting reference number 295DB and your salary expectations, by e-mail (info@lehrcare.de) to Dr. Jörg Köbke, who will also be happy to provide you with further information.
